Doctor Treats Healthy Folks In Risky Roles

NEW YORK—Most doctors treat sick people. But Dr. Vincent Nardiello's patients generally are strong, healthy brutes built like human bulldozers.

They just happen to be in an unhealthy business.

As a house physician at Madison Square Garden, Dr. Nardiello never runs short of variety. His cases range from a cowboy's brain concussion induced by a horse to a small boy's stomachache induced by too much circus candy.

The spectators, you see, are a health problem, too, in an arena which seats 18,000.

The doctor has repaired the fractured wrist of a Democratic judge who fell off the platform during a Republican rally (no foul play was proved). He has treated the black eyes of fight fans who got to fighting themselves. He has ministered to spectators for heart attacks brought on by thrills, for slight bruises caused by a rodeo cliff which suddenly appeared in the box seats, and for some of the world's classiest bites at championship dog shows.

Cowboy Customers

During the circus, Dr. Nardiello averages about 10 kids a day who are brought to his office with complaints of headaches, dizziness or stomach pains all brought on by overeating.

But generally the short, chunky house doctor is kept busiest by the assorted athletes and performers most of whom are in top shape when they enter the Garden.

His most frequent customers are the rodeo cowboys. During their stand at the Garden, he averages 15 to 20 cases of dislocated shoulders, fractured bruises and rope burns every night. In recent years there were two cowboys who died within four minutes after being kicked by horses.

The most durable athletes Dr. Nardiello knows are hockey players.

"I'll never forget Johnny Mowers, the Detroit goalie," the doctor says. "One night about five years ago he was smacked squarely in the teeth by a flying puck. He took 20 stitches and was back on the ice in 15 minutes."

He Needled 1,500

The biggest single job the doctor ever had at the Garden occurred in 1947, when he inoculated some 1,500 circus employees, including the tattooed lady, for smallpox.

One of the most tragic involved treating a trapeze flyer for shock and hysteria a few years ago. The man had tried to jump from an aerial platform after seeing his wife and partner miss her grip and fall to her death.

The performers closest to the doc's heart are the fighters. He used to be one himself, fighting for a time as a lightweight to work his way through medical school.

Dr. Nardiello is 60 and still very busy. He generally doesn't leave the Garden until after midnight, and the Garden is dark only one or two nights between Labor day and late spring, when the circus ends.

Man Obtains Court Order To Get Bed from Stepson

BOSTON —It took a court order, but George MacMasters may sleep now in the master bedroom of his Holbrook home.

His 14-year-old stepson, John Rock, must stop "usurping" the big bedroom and from now on must sleep in a smaller room in the attic.

Judge John E. Swift fixed the sleeping arrangements in Suffolk county superior court. At MacMasters' request he issued a temporary injunction restraining the boy.

The 40-year-old linoleum-factory pressman had charged that he was "prevented from enjoying the ease and comfort of my own home." He asked the court to declare his stepson a trespasser in the home.

MacMasters told Judge Swift his stepson's "misbehavior is inspired by his mother," Mrs. Ann Rock MacMasters, from whom MacMasters is seeking a divorce.

Electric Shocks to Test Elephant Fence Strength

PORT ELIZABETH.—Giving a herd of wild elephants electric shocks to save them from extinction has posed the problem of how strong a shock must be given to make an elephant jump.

In erecting an electrified fence to discourage the dwindling herd of elephants of the Addo bush near here from straying over farm lands where the farmers will wage war on them, the keepers mapped a plan to test the shock.

The elephants will be led to the fence by a trail of oranges—about 1,000 oranges being used—with the idea that the beasts will follow the juicy trail and lean against the fragile-looking fence to knock it down. Then they'll get a surprise. When experts find how much current is needed, they will fence the whole area where the elephants roam.

Public Is Irked As Policemen Try Blue Law Support

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Police tried to enforce Sunday blue laws, but the shows went on and patrons got into the acts.

Shuttling back and forth in a steady rain from their theaters to the police station, 24 managers, projectionists, and ticket sellers and takers were arrested, released on bond and arrested again for a total of 96 times. Three projectionists made the trip eight times.

Three policemen reported that their uniforms peppered them with tomatoes.

At the Saenger theater, a projectionist locked himself in the projection room in an effort to keep the show going. A police man simply doffed his cap and used it to block the projection outlet. The screen went black. Patrons booed and yelled.

When police got an ax and a crowbar and prepared to break down the door, the theater opened the room, and the projectionist was taken off to jail.

While he was gone, organ music was played and couples danced on the stage.

To prevent their ticket sellers from being arrested, some theaters closed the box offices and accepted "free will" donations at the entrance.

Police have tried to enforce Mississippi's blue laws which ban motion pictures after 6 p.m. on Sundays. Despite the numerous arrests and interruptions, however, all of Hattiesburg's six theaters continued to operate until their regular hours.

Countess Routs Burglar Who Invaded Tower Home

AYLESBURY, ENGLAND.—"I've got you covered," growled the countess.

The burglar took one look at the leveled pistol and left her bedroom on the dead run.

That, 57-year-old Lady Rosebery is telling her friends, is why a prowler at Mentmore Towers—the Rosebery estate—went away empty-handed.

Lady Rosebery said she keeps a gun in a secret hiding place near her bed for just such emergencies

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear Dad and Husband, Royal J. Coleman, who departed this life one year ago, August 27, 1948.

We have missed our Dad so often,
And have thought of him each day.
In our hearts the memory lingers,
Of the day he passed away.

But we must not murmur or complain,
At the work of God's unerring hand;
We'll just hope to meet him again,
In that sweet and happy land.

—Sadly missed by:
Wife and Children.

IN MEMORIAM:

DICKERSON—A tribute of love to the memory of my dear husband, and loving father, Joel Wise, who fell asleep August 28, 1948.

He would not want the ones he loved
To grieve for him today.
We must not say that he is dead,
For he is just away:
Away up in a journey
To a land that is bright and fair;
And tho' we miss him here,
We know he is happy there.
And memories of him will bring
New comfort every day;
As we recall he is not dead,
For he is just away.
—Loving Wife and Children.
